Summer at Doghill

Kesä Koiramäessä

THEMES: SUMMER, HISTORY, TRADITIONS

*The summer book of all times
-a classic from the start!*

"If only it were always summer and holiday, and never winter and Monday."

Aukusti, a good friend of the Doghill children, arrives from the city to spend the summer at the vicarage. He gets to enjoy a true countryside summer with Elsa, Kille and Martta.

And what a summer it turns out to be! The children build a tree-house, splash around in the lake, organise a fishing trip and snack on berries. And, of course, participate in the Walpurgis and Mid-summer bonfires. A fishing trip with the Reverend turns into an adventure by a sudden thunderstorm.

The Doghill children learn about plants, birds and animals as well as different summertime traditions, holidays and predictions throughout the summer.

Veera has invited Tatu and Patu to celebrate Christmas with her. The boys are thrilled: finally they get to take part in Christmas celebrations!

Alas, the boys accidentally go to the wrong house: they end up at the Lahtinen family's house, empty as the family has travelled to Tenerife for Christmas.

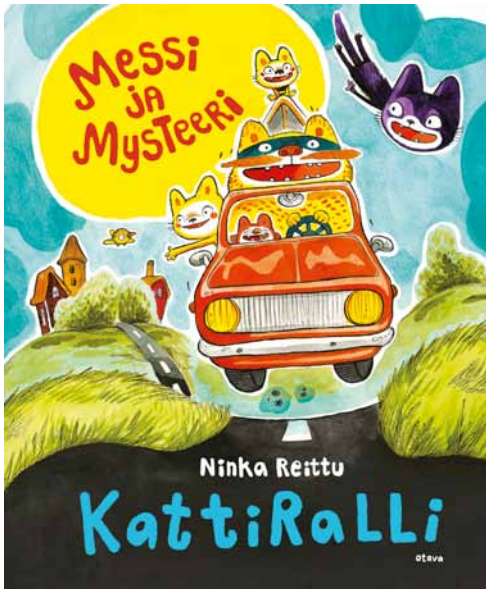

As no Christmas preparations are clearly underway at all, Tatu and Patu decide to put their minds to it and give Veera a pleasant surprise. First the boys set out to find out how to stuff crackers, as nothing creates Christmas cheer quite like Christmas crackers with fun trinkets, they remember Veera saying...

Thrilling excitement for pre-school children

The cats come across all sorts of travellers on their trip: the fox family's American classic car has skidded into a swamp, the farmer's trailer has thrown a somersault, builders and their van are entirely lost and a hot air balloonist would like company on his adventures. Messi, the Mystery Cat and the others try to help as best they can. And when the cats themselves land in trouble with their car, help from their new friends is much needed.

Mauri ja vähä-älypuhelin

THEMES: HUMOUR, ADVENTURE

One night Mauri's phone transforms from a veritable dumb phone to a real Konegtig smart phone

Just as well, since everything's been pretty boring. If mum had money, Mauri could fly to Egypt to see Bashir. But as she doesn't, Mauri begins to dig a tunnel between his home in Pasila and Egypt, because that would be entirely free to use.

THEMES: HUMOUR, TEENAGERS

The start of Year 7 for the master messer-upper is less than promising. The second part of the Truth About Taru series.

There is a master messer-upper living in every teenage girl

Taru has a perfect plan for how Year 7 will start: she'll burst onto the scene all trimmed and tanned. But things don't quite go to plan. Instead of sporting a tan, Taru is pale and worn down by a horrible stomach bug.

The others have had a few days' head start to the school year, and Taru has lost her best friend Aino to Nea (because she couldn't be bothered to choose French) and Ilmo has taken off with the football crowd.

Nadja Sumanen

Rambo

Rambo

THEMES: FAMILY, REALITY

The winner of Young Adults Novel Competition

Rambo gives a platform to the youth who rarely get their voice heard

Rambo has been raised by his mother and is used to coping on his own when mum is depressed. He has a short fuse but a vivid imagination, and in school he avoids the company of those who are better off.

Getting to go to mum's boyfriend's parents' cabin brightens up the summer holidays. What a paradise: structure to the day, meal times and the most warm-hearted hosts you could imagine! The peace is broken by cocky Liina's arrival. On the surface it would appear she's doing just fine, but is she any happier than Rambo?

Nadja Sumanen's depiction of her characters spans three generations and is so warm and moving it's a shame to part with the characters at the end of the novel!

Nadja Sumanen

(born 1975) is an occupational therapist and mother to two children, and loves spending time with her family at their cabin. She values sincerity, food prepared with love and cycling on forest roads.

Rambo is her first novel.

Tuija Lehtinen

The Gap Year

Välivuosi

THEMES: FRIENDSHIP, FAMILY

A gap year sounded like a bad joke to Simo. He could never have imagined that a year could be a shortcut to happiness

Two very different single parent families merge. Simo, his cultural producer bohemian mother and a little stepsister from Tikkurila. Lime, her astrophysicist professor father and little sister from Kauniainen. Simo is starting Year 10. Lime is in a maths-focused class and a genius, just like her father.

Simo feels like he's landed in a poor reality TV series where members of blended families attempt to kill each other, whereas Lime is reliving the old family series The Munsters. Not a love story in the slightest.

Tuija Lehtinen's narrative is optimistic and bright. Clear and astute insight on relationships and the realities of youth today give depth to an entertaining surface.
